

The image shows a horizontal sheet of graph paper. The left side features a header section with several columns of varying widths, likely for labels or data entry. The rest of the sheet is a uniform grid of small squares. The grid is approximately 100 columns wide and 20 rows high. The header section on the left consists of about 10 columns, with the first column being the narrowest and the others being slightly wider. The grid lines are thin and black, set against a white background.
